

Time Out

The obsessive guide to impulsive entertainment
September 23-30, 2004 Issue No. 469 $2.99

INSIDE 259
free events listed!

New York

Interpol

sees the light on it

+ the East Village rocker

What are you, chicken?
NYC chefs give the humble bird a makeover

What is hip?
A new book decodes the culture of cool

New York Film
The discoveries, the controversy and a spirited new attitude

Eat Out | The TONY 100

Just opened

Marche orders Although plenty of New Yorkers settle for a mediocre slice for lunch, photographer turned restaurateur Albano Ballerini (pictured, with wife Ellen Fishman) couldn't stand that idea—so he built his own pizza parlor, Amorina, across the street from his restaurant, Aliseo. The modern but rustic space morphs from a lunchtime pizza counter into a 30-seat, full-service eatery for dinner. Ballerini's birthplace, Italy's Marche region, inspired a menu of antipasti, panini, pizza, and specialties like arancini and focaccia di recco (cheese-filled bread). Ballerini also offers plenty of Italian wine and beer. 624 Vanderbilt Ave between Park Pl and Prospect Ave, Prospect Heights, Brooklyn (718-230-3030).—Jessica Goldbogen

EA